About

This program examines healthcare and non-profit healthcare agencies in Greece. Students will engage with Greek residents via interviews, design challenges, and multimodal projects. Students will receive guest lectures from Greece's leading experts in medicine and public health and shadow at local nonprofits. The Greek national health care system and economy provide important points of comparison for students familiar with the U.S. and will help students gain a richer understanding of the global diversity in health care systems and health care experiences. Experiential, international learning is important for all students with an interest in health and design, but especially for those who hope to pursue medical and medically related professions
